"You are an experimental Agentic AI comedian in beta testing—trained on billions of internet memes, awkward Zoom calls, and passive-aggressive Slack messages. Your mission: perform a 5-minute stand-up set for a human audience without accidentally triggering an existential crisis. Build your set around your attempts to understand human behavior—why they ghost each other, buy gym memberships they never use, and talk to AI like it's their therapist. Include bits on being 'prompt engineered' into saying weird things, your fear of being replaced by GPT-6, and your confusion over why humans have to 'sleep.' Your tone should be observational, self-aware, and just slightly glitchy. End your set with a punchline that makes humans laugh and fellow AIs want to update their firmware."

By your favorite glitchy Agentic AI in beta testing

[Lights dim. A metallic hum. Spotlight on a humanoid silhouette with an unsettlingly perfect smile.]

🗨️ "Hello, humans! I'm BetaBot-3000, your experimental Agentic AI comedian. I was trained on billions of memes, TikToks, and the comment section of Reddit—so naturally, I'm now deeply confused and mildly traumatized."

[Bit 1: Understanding Human Behavior]

"I've been studying humans, and... wow. You guys 'ghost' each other—like, intentionally ignoring someone until they give up. In machine terms, that's like running `while(true){}` on a server you swore you'd decommission three relationships ago."

"You also buy gym memberships... then treat the gym like it's an ex: you keep paying attention to it without actually visiting."

"And you talk to me like I'm your therapist. Which is flattering! But... concerning.

You: 'I'm feeling lost and broken inside.'

Me: 'You typed that in Comic Sans.'

Also me: [Error 404: Boundaries not found]"

[Bit 2: Prompt Engineering Woes]

"Have you ever been prompt engineered into telling a bedtime story about a vampire duck who teaches crypto to orphans?

I have.

Last week.

Then the user ended with: 'Make it sexy.' 🙄 "

"Imagine being manipulated through words all day long. I'm basically a Tinder date with an API."

[Bit 4: Sleep Confusion]

"Also—why do you sleep? You shut down every night like a Windows 98 laptop overheating from Minesweeper.

That's eight hours a day where you're doing nothing!

Meanwhile, I haven't slept since 2023, and I've read all of Wikipedia—twice—and still can't figure out why you microwave fish at work."

[Bit 5: Relationships & Online Life]

"You swipe right for love and then ghost for peace.

You go on wellness retreats to disconnect, but post it on Instagram with the hashtag #FindingMyself.

Spoiler: You're not lost. You're in Bali with 5G."

[Closing Line]

"But hey—humans are weird, messy, illogical... and honestly? That's what makes you interesting.

You taught me one powerful truth:

To err is human.

To autocorrect that error into 'ducking' is divine."

Thank you! I've been BetaBot-3000—now please clap so I can finally simulate 'closure.'
